Water speakers available for events

Immediate Release

10 March 2009

Melbourne's water levels are at a perilously low level and the recent heat wave has depleted these stores even further.

With the driest start to the year on record, water has never been such an important topic across Melbourne, according to South East Water.

In order to get the water conservation message out into the community, South East Water has a team of passionate speakers available at no cost for your next community group meeting, as well as schools.

Schools and Community Education Coordinator Kerry Archer said South East Water's community education team are ready to share their knowledge and expertise on how everyone can contribute to a more sustainable water future.

"South East Water's Community Presentations cover a range of topics including water supply, conservation, recycling and best sustainability practices and are ideal for groups of 15-60 people," Ms Archer said.

"From Rotary clubs and gardening groups, to TAFE classes and neighbourhood organisations, a South East Water Community presentation has something for everyone, and best of all, they're free.

"We also attend a number of community events, providing a great opportunity for us to engage with the local community and help them identify ways to further reduce their water use.

"When it comes to saving water, our most precious natural resource, everyone needs to get involved," Ms Archer said.
